To the Reverend

DIWHITE KENNET, D.D.

In Defence of

The English Historical Library:

AGAINST

The Unmannerly and Slanderous Objections of Mr. F. R. A. N. C. I.S. ATTER-BURT, Preacher at the R.O. L. L. S., In his New Theory of the Rights, Powers and Priviledges of an English Communities.

By W. NICOLSON, Arch-Descen of

Printed for Tanah Club or the Williams

LETTER

bassous Hell of

DOWNIE ELEMANT, DIE

to be then con the

The English Historical Library.

ACAINST

The Liminance in the North Concession Office in the Liminance of the North Reversion Office in the Reversion of the Right, Property of the Right Concession.

By U. MICOLSON Arch-Deacon of CAKLILE.

LONDON:

Printed for Timothy Childe at the White Hart, at at the West End of St. Paul's Charch-yard, 1702.

ring; leaving his new Infults to live or die, at the

The Fuft Part of the English Englished Library met with an Acceptance so far exceeding my hopes that I hashiy threw the Ach of my Notes together in a rull and confident Assurance, that, whatever their te must be mongh the 15th and Statevers of the English would so the recommend in less to Men of Gravity and good Learning, as to invite some of the 15th and of the State State of the 15th and of the 15th and so the 15th and so the 15th and 15th a sectly become And therefore to be accossed in such a section of the following of the content of the sold and a charman in Ordinary, was (I consess) very surprizing. I have often sensity reseased on the anappropri der at this inexpected Address, since every other good Member of our Church must be truely tentible how far your late powerful Defence of our Establishment (against the pernicious Tenets of some forward Projectors) has merited a publick Return of our Thanks. And the kind concern you have been pleased to express the my particular share, in the common Caule of our sufficiency, obliges one to the most early section-ledgement. You have let the World know how unjust some of Mr. Atterbucy's Slanders are and what distonest Care he has taken (in the Second Edition of his Book), to palliate others, wherein even his own Conscience had discover a the Injuries he had done me. I have Reason to believe that his former Edition is in more hands than the later, and therefore shall continue my self, in this Reply to that; leaving his new Infults to live or die, at the discretion of his Readers.

The First Part of the English Historical Library met with an Acceptance fo far exceeding my hopes, that I hastily threw the test of my Notes together, in a full and confident Assurance, that, whatever their Fite might be amongs the Wiss and Banterers of the Age, the Delign would fo far recommend it felf to Men of Gravity and good Learning, as to invite some of them to finish what I had so imperfectly begun: And therefore to be accosted in such a bluftering and furly manner, as I have been, by a Clergy-man, a Preacher at the Rolls, and a Chaplain in Ordinary, was (I confess) very furprizing. I have often fenfibly reflected on the unhappy coarfeness of Stile and Behaviour to which we Countrey Parsons, as they call us, are inevitably condemn'd: But, furely (thought I) the Divines at Court, all of em, to a Man, are perform of a more polish'd and smooth Demeanour. This, I now find. is a Mifrake, and tis indeed the Greatest which Mr. Atterbury has discovered to me. I was also abundantly conscious (no Man more!) of the ma ny other Inconvenient Circumsta ces P labour under, and, with as much Modele and Planeling as I am Master of, begid the Assistance of others more fortunate and able than my felf. Such Helps, as I lought for have been generously afforded me by State; whole obliging Encouragements have raise me above the impotent Malice of any fuch Pert and Pedling Retailer of another Man's Collections, as Mr. Atterbury has thewn himself to be. What he handed out to the World, relating to me and my

my Works, I shall examine in the same order he gives it e leaving the großer Blunders of his Bock to the due Chastinement of thole Greater Men with whom he has done me the Honour to bespatter me.

0

h

IVALICE

The first Glance of Favour that I have from him is pretty early, towards the beginning of his Preface; where he gives his Reader a Chronological Account of the Advances made towards the Destruction of the Effablish'd Church, fince the publishing of Dr. Wake's dangerous Book. The Diffenting Ministers in London, as he proves from the Authentick Evidence of a Notable Letter, have had their General Micring; and the Non Conformits in Dublin have open'd their Synod with a Sermon: Nay, and to complete our Ruine, a New Definition of Convocations has obtain'd a which we are now sold are only Occasional Affemblies, &cc. For a Proof of this latt (Crowning) Mischief, he refers to my Historical Library. I have not been accustom'd to Herd with such Companions as he there assigns me; yet, since he will have it for let me reason the Case a little with him on the behalf of my new Friends. He ought certainly to have Registred the Dublin Sermon in his Appendix: For it must be a very forry one, if tis not more Edifying, and more to his purpole, than the Newbury-Letter. Nor has he dealt fairly with this Berbsbire-Epistle; whereof he has Printed a very faulty Copy. Lonce law a Transcript of this famous Record, in the hand of a very worthy Member of Parliament, in the County of Cumberlana; to whom it was communicated by an Eminent Divine of our Church, whose usual place of Residence is in Bokstire, and not far from Newbury. His sendthat; leaving his new Infults to live or die, at the discretion of his Readers.

The First Part of the English Historical Library met with an Acceptance fo far exceeding my hopes, that I hastily threw the test of my Notes together, in a full and confident Assurance, that, whatever their Fate might be amongst the Wits and Banterers of the Age, the Delign would fo far recommend it self to Men of Gravity and good Learning, as to invite some of them to finish what I had so imperfectly begun: And therefore to be accosted in such a bluftering and furly manner, as I have been, by a Clergy-man, a Preacher at the Rolls, and a Chaplain in Ordinary, was (I confess) very furprizing. I have often sensibly reflected on the unhappy coarfeness of Stile and Behaviour to which we Countrey Parsons, as they call us, are inevitably condemn'd: But, furely (thought 1) the Divines at Court, all of 'em, to a Man, are Persons of a more polish'd and smooth Demeanour. This, I now find, is a Miftake; and 'tis indeed the Greatest which Mr. Atterbury has discover'd to me. I was also abundantly conscious (no Man more!) of the many other inconvenient Circumsta ces I labourd under, and, with as much Modefty and Plamility as I am Master of, beg'd the Affistance of others more fortunate and able than my telf. Such Helps, as I fought for, have been generously afforded me by several of the greatest Emmence in our Church and State; whole obliging Encouragements have rais'd me above the impotent Malice of any fuch Pert and Pedling Retailer of another Man's Collections, as Mr. Atterbury has shewn himself to be. What he has handed our to the World, relating to me and my

C

D

b ti

(3)

my Works, I shall examine in the same order he gives it; leaving the großer Blunders of his Bock to the due Chastigement of thole Greater Men with whom he has done me the Honour to bespatter me.

The first Glance of Favour that I have from him is pretty early, towards the beginning of his Preface: where he gives his Reader a Chronological Account of the Advances made towards the Destruction of the Establish'd Church, since the publishing of Dr. Wake's dangerous Book. The Diffenting Ministers in London, as he proves from the Authentick Evidence of a Notable Letter, have had their General Meeting; and the Non-Conformists in Dublin have open'd their Synod with a Sermon: Nay, and to complete our Ruine, a New Definition of Convocations has obtain'd; which we are now told are only Occasional Assemblies, &cc. For a Proof of this latt (Crowning) Mischief, he refers to my Historical Library. I have not been accustom'd to Herd with such Companions as he there assigns me; yet, since he will have it fo, let me reason the Case a little with him on the behalf of my new Friends. He ought certainly to have Registred the Dublin Sermon in his Appendix: For it must be a very forry one, if 'tis not more Edifying, and more to his purpole, than the Newbury-Letter. Nor has he dealt fairly with this Berksbire-Epistle; whereof he has Printed a very faulty Copy. I once faw a Transcript of this famous Record, in the hand of a very worthy Member of Parliament, in the County of Cumberlana; to whom it was communicated by an Eminent Divine of our Church, whose usual place of Residence is in Berkstire, and not far from Newbury. SMIRT

tra

age

Re

pre

in kn

Di

tha

WI

an

Bo

Fin

fec

fre

of

th

11

Se

10

01

W

H

1

ing it thither was supposed to be with a Design of having it consider'd in the approaching Session, as a Matter of terrible Confequence, and therefore, we may affure our felves, all imaginable Care was taken to have the wicked Instrument most exactly Copy'd. There the fetled Correspondence of the Dissenting Congregations was declar'd to be for the Advancement of the Interest of Religion, and Reformation of MANNERS; the same good End which some Committees of Ministers and Gentlemen, in our own Communion, have propos'd to themselves; Whereas this Printed Letter fets up for the Reformation of MINISTERS, which looks like a Plot of another fashion, and may end the Lord knows where. So much in Justice to my Brethren of the Separation: Let me now look to my felf. If the Reader happens to confult that part of my Book, to which he directs him, he'l find that this New Definition is none of mine; but that 'twas drawn up by the late admirable Bishop Stilling fleet, to whose deep Learning, and exact Judgment, this Church stands eternally indebted. Hereby he'l unluckily discover that the Definition is not so New, as Mr. A. (for some special purposes of his own) has represented it) and that a Charge given in 1696. could hardly be filch'd out of a Book Printed in 1697. and fo much Poiled to the Preis, as (I am pretty well affur'd; that of Dr. Wake's was. But (besides this Intonvenience) he will also presently consider, that the Bishop was One of that establish'd Reputat on, that 'twas hazardous to Attack him openly. At least, 'twas by no means adviseable to do it here in the beginning of his Book; because the thwarting with fo great a Man, at the very Entrance mance, might disgust his Reader, and prejudice him against all that was to follow. For these weighty Reasons, the whole Load of his Indignation (for the present) rests upon me: Tho, as soon as he shall, in sour or sive of his sirst Chapters, let the World know what a mighty Man he is at Syllogism and Dint of Argument, His Lordship's Friends shall find that His Works will be consider'd as roughly (and with as little Ceremony) as those of meaner Men.

The next Jerk he gives me, is (Pref. vii.) for relying too Implicitely upon Spelman's Glossary; and on the Credit of the Postbumous part of that Book, mistaking the Third Year of King James the First for the Seventh, in the momentous History of a Dictionary. The Errour here is of no fatal Confequence that I know of; and I told the world as he tells it after me, whence I had the Account: from hence to conclude that I never faw any Edition of Cowel's Interpreter, is arguing according to his wonted exactness in Logick. I might as well affirm that he never faw a Common-Prayer-Book; because (p. 275.) he cites the Second Collect, in the Service of the Fifth of November, instead of the First. Such a Trip as this I should willingly have over-look'd and pardon'd, but 'tis fo parallel to that of mine, that he'l forgive the taking this fleight Notice of it: Especially, since it may remind a Man of his New and curious Interpretation of the word Clergy in that Prayer; which, he faies, means the whole Ecclesiaftical state (both Upper and Lower House of Convocation) then assembled in Parliament. This is a Notable Remark indeed, and proves that the Conspiratours villainously design'd to blow-up St. Paul's Church as well as St: Stephen's Chappel: a Secret not formerly discover'd. He raises another special Inference from the foremention'd mistaken Date, which is, that I am always an Implicite Transcriber. I find, by his ERRATA, that the word Always (when he speaks of my Lord of Saram) signifies Often and Sometimes; and, for his own take as well as mine, I would beg the Benefit of that Interpretation here: For otherwise, the Expression looks a little too hafty and round, to be confiftent with that staurch Gravity and Veracity which the World expects in a Church-Advocate and a Preacher. Now, admitting this fignification of the word, I may as justly aftert that Mr. Atterbury is always in an Errour; fince it has been made very plain of late that Sometimes, and very Often, he is fo. Implicite is his darling Epithet. It's ever in readiness for any Man that Steps in his way; and I am content to take my share of it, where-ever he pelales to assign it me. I cannot so easily allow it upon some other Oc. cations, as when he affirms that the Provincial (a) Synod of York is obliged implicitely to follow the Determinations of that of Canterbury. The Author of Antiquitates Britimnica (whom he acknowledges to have (b) best understood our Constitution) tells us, that, in the Third Year of King Henry the First's Reign, the Clergy at Tork unanimously rejected Archbishop Anselm's Synodical Constitutions And the lifue is very remarkable; for hereupon, (c) Statim Spreta aty, contempta fuerunt. I could give some other Instances wherein it appears that we have not be n always Implicite Transcribers of the Copy

(e

Pr

pl

pe

ra

an

OF

5

90

1 4

1 8

0

1

1 8

Th

WE

Br

Wa

Id

ve

of

m

⁽a) Rights, &c. p. 46. 335. (i) Ibid. p. 342. (c) Antiquitat. Bit fet us by our Brethren of Canturbury: But, as I hope never to see any Clashing betwixt the two provinces for the fature, so neither do I take any pleasure in recounting the Disputes that have hap-pen'd heretofore.

(2)

After these light Skirmishes, out comes his Declaration of War; which, to keep me in my Calling, and to preferve it for a Precedent to future Generations, I shall here implicitely Transcribe. 'There's a Third Gentleman, (Mr. Nicolfon, by Name, fays the Margin) who, in a late Book of his, has taken upon him to be a kind of Umpire in this Controverfy. By what fecret Motive he was invited to underake this Office, he best knows; Sure I am it was not out of any peculiar Skill or Abillity he had to discharge it. Since he has gone out of his way to mix in a Dispute that did not belong to him, he must excuse me, if I have not gone out of mine, to avoid feeing his millakes, which I have taken notice of no otherwise, than as the Course of my Reflections, and the particular Matter I was upon, led me to observe them: And, even at this Rate, the Crap of Errors was plentiful. This were a most terrible and astenishing Charge, were there as much real Trush in it as there's feeming Bravery: But, to my great Confort, it wholy wants that most formidable Ingredient. For, 1. Idid not take upon me to be an Umpirein the Controversy; having only given my Reader the Decision of it in the words of a mast Religious, Learned, and Venerable, Father in God: (a) Who (befides bis

⁽⁴⁾ See the Warretive of the Proceedings in the late Lower House of Convoc. p. 39.

bis other Excellencies so well known) was a Skilful Canonist, an able Civilian, and particularly knowing in the Constitution of our Church. All that I ventur'd to advance, of my own Thoughts, was, That the Con. troverly had been manag'd with somwhat of an unbecom. ing Bitternels and Zeal: And I wish that the Preach. er had given me any Reason to hope that what follow'd would be in a better Temper. 2. I was not under the Influence of any fuch Secret Motives, as he here uncharitably Suggests. I thankfully adore the Divine Providence for giving me my Lot in my Native Countrey: Where, for Twenty Years past, I have liv'd in a (b) Reputation, out of which he can never write me; and have contented my felf with Preferments, of an humble and modest Value, into which he will never desire to write himself. But, 3. Supposing I had been that bold Judertaker he speaks of, he can never be fure that I want either Skill or Abillity to discharge the Office: Since I am much furer that he's no fuch Competent Judge of my Parts, Temper and Principles, as he pretends to be. No. No. The Man that quotes Gervafe of Dover, in words at length, that thinks an Hired Clerk (tho' it fignifies neither more nor less than a Court-Chaplain) an odd Expression in the Saxon Chronicle, Gc. May brush up his Eyebrows as high as he pleases, but he's not (at all) that fure Man, that he takes himself to be, in matters of English History and Antiquities And, 4. How is it (can you imagine, Sir) that have gone out of my way in what Thave written of this Subject? Ought I not to have mention'd the Convocation amongst our other Ecclesiastical Courts

⁽b) See Mr. A's Pref. towards the end.

Are there no Memoirs here that may be of any use to an English Historian? If there be any such (as, 'tis hoped, his immortal Book will be an Everlafting Testimony that there are (I cannot see how I came to be belide my Road when I treated of the Nature and Constitution of this Court. And, lastly, is he likewise fare that he will keep bis Road better than I have done mine? Will he never take notice of my (fuppos'd) Mistakes any otherwise than as the Course of his Reflections, and the particular matter he's upon, leads bim to observe them? Before he and I part, I shall convince him of the slackness of his Memory in this point; and, in order to't, shall here briefly affure you (Sir) that, after all the pains he has taken (both in his way and out of it, which truly I know not well how to diffinguish) he has reap'd no such plentiful Crop of Errors, in my Books, as he vainly imagines. For Example.

P. 18. He leeringly produces a Passage, wherein I maintain that the Covocations were heretofore frequently Inhibited, even in the very Writs of Summons, from Decreeing any thing to the prejudice of the King or his Realms. These indeed are my very words, and I do refer my Reader, for a Proof of em, to Dugdale's Summons in the Reigns of Edward the First and his Son: Where (faies Mr. A.) there's not a word so this purpose, nor can there be; for Dug-dale has no Writs for Convocations, but only for the Parliament. To this I can as boldly reply, Sir William Dugdale (in his Book of Summons) has a great many Writs for Convocations, and in feveral of thefe, within the Reigns mention'd, there are fuch Inhibitions as I speak of. To try this Issue fairly, Limust defire Mr. Atterbury to remember that (from my tongeneig. But p. son (b) En Brices areas Authority) I have told him that there are some Convocations that are call'd by the King's West to the Bishops as Members of Parliament: Which he is so far from reckoning a Millake, that he chiefly proves the Right of all his own Convocations to a Stated Time of fitting from these very Writs. Nay, he's fo much in Love with the Clause of Premunicates, that he produces the Opinions of Council, to avouch, that this alone is warrant enough for the Members of our present Convocations, to meet and affemble themselves at the opening of every New Parliament: So that he must necessarily agree with me, that, tho' Dugdale has no Provincial Writs, yet he hasgiven us good ftore of the other kind, which (upon his own Principles) are as properly Writs for the Convocation as for the Parliament. I must take a little more pains to clear his Understanding in the other particular; because the Inhibitions that are couch'd in many of these Writs, are not so easily discoverable by a Writer in fo much Heat and Hurry as he feems to be. He must know then, that Ed. ward the First was forced from his Wars in France. by the Treachery of Archbishop (a) Winchelfey who funder the pretence of redrelling Grievances. and easing the Country of their heavy Taxes) had And some of our Historians say, that, at the same time this King took the Advantage of fomething like a Promanize, into which the Clergy had fallen by a too close Adherence to the Measures prescribed them by that Archbishop. Take the Account in the words of my Author: (b) Rex Edwardus fecit fathii ominia Tempuratia Clericarum, eximens cos a Propositione fue, quad como pracedenti nollent cum respicere de bemis ficis acontino Scottos ; vomo Robertos Archiepifeapas de confin a Clevi procunament a Pape Indibitionem na quie Chericovum Regem nespicenet de bonis suis unde de plures Prelatorum simone coasti Processionem Region qualiquemor. The King, having the Churchmen thus in the like condition wherein they were afterwards caught by Henry the Eighth, thought it convenient to take this Opportunity (as King Henry likewife did) of hampering 'em in their Debates, and confining them to fush matters as he thought proper to lay before them: "Whareupon, the Kenr following, their Writs of Summons were alter'd to for whereas they formerly randingeneral Terms Saper days for seday Negatits Valifeum Collagueum le Tradition babone Felv mus] the stile was now a great deal more firid and limitting, (a) proper quadem Spacialia sa ardua Ne gotia -- Vobifcum Speciale of or formatimes Seaciatizer) Colleguium balene Welumus Diqw of This Gentleman's Learned Acquaintance in the lines of Court will tell him, that the word Specially in our Lawsproceedings, lignifies all one as Particularly or (if he pleases) Individuely, and therefore the Prince who calle upon his Great Council on laws Special Occasion, or so advise with them Specially, fore-closes their finiting into Debates of a foreign Natures And this with his gracious Allowance, I would make bold to call an Inbihition; which is much more frequently to be found in she Belly of a Convocation-Weil (fasithe prettily words it) than he imaginal I p confess the word specially occurs

W. STY O

⁽a) Antiq. Brit. p. 204. (b) Th. Wikes, ad An. 1248.

⁽a) Dugd. Summ, 27. Ed. 1. p. 24.28. Ed. 1. p. 86. &c. and 18 d.s.
p. 57. 2 Ed. 2. p. 16. A state of the stat in the Writs directed to the Temporal Lords, of those Times, as well as in these that Summon the Clergy; And I have great Authorities for't, that this proves that They were likewife limitted in their Debates. I could here fill my Margin with Quotations: But I shall content my felf with a Single Writer, who (for feveral Reasons) ought to be had in great Veneration by this Preacher. 'Tis Dr. Peter Heylin, (a) of happy Memory; who allows that the Expression in the Parliamentary-Writs Tad Trastand. Super quibusdam ardnis Regni Negotiis] limits and restrains their Debates to such particular Cases as the King thinks fit to consult them jupon. Thus, Sir, have I once more acquainted him whence I drew this Curious Remark, as he sportingly calls it: Nor can I think there will be any Occasion to alter one word in this passage upon a Second Edition of my Book, which his little Splenetick Reflections will never be able to prevent.

P. 31. He tells you that I do not feeld to have confider at that the mix'd Meetings held by the Saxon Kings were stil'd Synodi and Concilia, because (in my Notes on Camden's Northumberland) I assert the meeting at Twiford, in which St. Cuthbert was chosen Bishop, to have been no Synod, but a Parliament. Tis much I should not consider this; when I there particularly refer the Reader to King Elfred's Translation of Bede's Ecclesiassical History, wherein that meeting has no other Name given it than Sinoth. But, tho this was a proper Name for it in the Days of Bede and his Royal Paraphrast, I think the word Parliament suits better with the Language of

⁽a) Advertisements on Sandersons Life of King James the First, P. 24.

Mr. Camden's Time and mine; and therefore I humb. ly offer it, as an amendment of my Author's Text, to put in a word of modern use, instead of one now obfolete, as to the true Meaning and Import there intended. I have many things to add to the short Account which I gave of this Matter in my Notes on the Britania. I shall now only need to observe, that the Original Manuscript of the Legend of St. Cuthbert (an Exact Copy whereof I have, by the favour of the worthy and famous Mr. Evelyn) accquaints us that King Egfrid was, at that time, attended both with the Lords Temporal and Spiritual: Which, I prefume, will go a great way towards the making it a Parliamentary Meeting. After all; Let Sir Henry Spelman himself be my Advocate in this cause: (a) Licet enim(faies he) zoros Concilium fonat & Conventum tam Sacularium quam Ecclefiafticorum, et ipfarum etiam aliquando feminarum; Obtinuit tamen usus Vulgaris, cum apad Recentlores, tum apud Veteres, ut de Ecclefiaficarum Comitits plerumq, cenferetur.

P. 148, 149. He observes that I follow Dr. Wake in the Story of Henry the Eighth's correcting the Articles. By following here he does not mean (as some of his Readers may rashly Suppose) that I take this upon the Doctor's Authority, but only that My Book was Penn'd, or Publish'd, after His: Which, for several Reasons that might be alledg'd, is most demonstrably true. That his Words are thus, and no otherwise, to be expounded, is very plain: For the Doctor, it seems, had his Tale from my Lord of Salisbury; and I have mine (as the Critick himself confesses) from my Lord Herbers. Mr. Atterbury has transcrib'd my Lord Herbert's Words, as I have done, and I cannot (for my life) see but that I have done it fairly, and that the Authority in this Case cited is to be depended on. He is indeed wonderfully well dispos'd towards the Writing Animadversions on my Books, but his Power is never answerable to his good Will.

P. 179. How the word Defence came to be Printed in my Book, instead of Dottrine, I cannottell: But I am very fure that the Title of the Book here mention'd Stands right in my first Collections, A necessary Dottrine, &cc. and I am very confident 'twas likewise so in that Transcript of my Papers which I sent to the Bookfeller. By his own accurate Work it appears that as great Slips as this may escape, where Authors are much nearer the Press than I was. But, the main of my Crime is that I have afferted that the King drew up the Articles in this Book, without intimating my dislike of it; or, letting the World know that what He did in this matter was at the prenious Permission of the Clergy, by whom it was afterwards Confirm'd in Convocation. The first Branch of this Charge is Fulfe; the Second, Scandalous and Samer, and the Third, Nonfesce. I say not a word of the King's drawing up these Articles, observing only that he wrote Animadver fious upon them, which the Preacher calls making some Marginal Amendments: And, if he's better pleas'd with that mode of expressing himself, he's welcome to let mine alone. What had I to do to intimate my diffice of the King's thus medling in Affairs of an Ecclefiaftical Nature? If indeed I had distik die, which I could fee no Cause for, it had been an impudent Digression to have Publish'd such a Sentiment. Yea, but (like an enge-

curate

((131))

of Notice of the King's doing all this at the previous Permission of the Clergy. No indeed, Sir, I do not. Not can I yet imagine why I should: For (besides that the being thus minutely Circumstantial is more the Business of an Historian than an Historical Librarian.) I cannot well apprehend how the Clergies humble Submission of the Book (to speak in its own Language) to Hir Majesty's most excellent Wisdom and exact Judgement, to be recognised, overfeen and conciled, &c. is consistent with their Authoritative permission of him to make his Alterations.

P. 2.14. He refumes the Debate about the New Definition of a Convocation, and previous remarks; that I am only a little Author that has copy definis out of a Great one. I very heartily acknowledge my felt to be extremely little, and even of no Confideration, when compared with fo truly great a man as the late Learned Bishop Stilling see: But, the Greater He was, and the Left I am, the weightier must the Reasons be that induce me tackely to Submit to his Judgment and Determination of the Controversy now before us. Talle thought it most agreable to the Nature of the best and purel General Councils, which (as is observed by (a) Richerous) dipatch'd their Debates most readily and peaceably whilst they continue under the Direction of the Civil Power. But our Animadverter is of a less pliable Temper; and therefore, let the Definition come from what hand is will, be this to the Definition of his Adversaries, his Skill is not proportionable to his Boldness: For, the he has Courage enough to far any thing that comes in his Head, he commonly wants the Art of Proving what he confidently and bravely afferts Well ; but wat's that hxact and Logical Definition which he'l oblige us with, in lieu of this clumfie one of the Bishop's? Why, us this: A Convocation is a Stated Provincial Synod, attendant on a Parliament, and, by the Commentaries he gives on't in the other parts of his Book, that Venerable Assembly appears (all over) in such a Disguise as I should never have known it in. I shall not here Nicely examine how Skilfully, or Unskilfully, this Newest Definition is drawn , but, leaving that point to be canvasid by his principal Antagonist, shall only freely declare, that I am still for abiding by my Lord of Worcefter's, which I take to be both older and better. I am sensible this is a sure way to contimue under the Preachers Displeasure, he having fex mero morn) let Mankind know that he cannot, for bis heart, like fuch as are of that Perswalion: For be remembers well that these were thought throughly honest by neither fide, who were for Occasional Communion What a frequous and invincible For have we here What (in the Name of Goodness!) have the Occaponal Communions of Diffenters to do with the Octaff onal Meenings of the Established Clergy? Must every Occasional Man and Thing be reprobated? I may possibly as little aprove of those Occasional Communions as himself; and yet icannot, for my Heart, dillike Occapional Eating and Drinking, when I am Hungry and Thirfly, without waiting for the Stated times of Dinner and Supper

⁽a) Hist. Comit. Com. His. F. Cop. 3th. Spring in om bas

P. 274. He abuses Sir Henry Spelman, his Reader and me, in puting the Words [Coram Episcopo et in Synodali

Synodali Conventu] together, as if the Synodalis Conventus (in the cited part of the Gloslary) were only to be understood of the County-Court, or some fuch other little mix'd Assembly, where the Bilhops sometimes sat: Whereas Sir Henry, having first mention'd the ratifying of Grants coram Domino Manerii coram Domino Hundredi, and coram Vice Comite, prefently adds - Solebant prateres, in conference Pradits Ecclesia, Chartam Sapins ad Altare, &cc. Sape utiq. in Conventu Synodali ratam facere. Which must necesfarily be understood of so many several Courts wherein these Matters were transacted, and after the two Jurisdictions were compleatly Seperated : For the learned Author manifestly distinguishes what was done Caram Synodali Conventa from what was acted coram

Rege et Paribus Regni, &cc.

P. 291, 292, &c. For four Pages together he's in great Fury with me for carrying the furifdiction of English Archdeacons no higher than the Conquest; which is a Fault, whereof (after all the Correction that he has given me) I do not yet find any occasion to repent. I cite a good Authority, afferting that it is no Elder, and he Sawcily observes that the Learned Bishop (to whom I appeal) publish a this in favour to his one Order, adding also (Very constituting), and like himself) that it was a Slip of his Memory. mory. But—Are his Saxon Testimonies, in this Case, Preserable to that of my partial and craz'd Bilhop? I trow not. There's not a word of these Ecclesiastical Judges, or their Courts, in all Lamantees. Confessour, confirm'd by the Conquerour.

Nor is it possible there should be: For we know very well that, throughout the Saxon times, the Bishops

Bishops (a) sat personally in the Court with the Sheriff and other great Men of their Dioceles; they (1) visitted yearly in their own persons, and never (as far as I could yet learn) acted by any fort of Deputies or Officials. Mr. Atterbury indeed produces a few infignificant and Counterfeit Records. fome of which feem to come up to his Point; and to multiply his Witnesses into a fairer Appearance of strength in their Numbers, he refers his Reader to the Decem Scriptores and Spelman's Councils for one and the same Testimony. Spelman says he met with feveral Copies of that Instrument, for which (as if it were some New Matter) the learned Preacher will needs fend us to the Evidences of Canterbury, or Daver; and he gives us one of 'em wherein the pretended Archdeacon (Wilfrid) is modeffly placed in the Reer of the Subscribing Bishops; whereas, in the impertiment Evidences of this great Parron of our Synodal Church, he takes his place in the very middle (c) of the Prelates; a Freedom which some late Writers would perswade us to believe, that even the Archdeacons of our own Age have a Title to. This Venerable Decree is said to be enacted at Bacon-celd, in the year 798. but we meet with it (d) afterwards, in a finer form, at Clovesboe, where the ingenious Monk, who new model'd it, has fet the Archbishop and his Suffragans in their proper Order; affigning each of 'em a Train of Abbats and Prieffs. who are suppos'd (forsooth) to attend them to the Synod from their respective Dioceses. In the close of iome of these Lists we have, here and there, an hu tr

ar W

fu

C

fc

n

T

th

he

in fai

to

⁽a) Vid. LL. Hen. 1. cap. 7. (b) Conffit. Odoni. Archiep. apudo Spelm. Concil. Tom. 1. p. 416. (c) Conf. Spelm. Tom. 1. p. 318. cum Evident. Cam. Col. 2212. (d) Speim, Tom. 1. p. 325.

humble Deacon : But, because 'twas fit that the Meropolican's should outshine therest, the Courtly Compiler of his famous Evidence has kindly dubb'd His an Aochdeacon; and twas in his power to have likewife furrounded him with Arch Abbats and Arch Priefts, Sir Henry Spelman was wifer than to draw any fuch Conclusions, as Mr. Atterbury has done, from any Canons in either of these Councils; and he would (especially) have been asham'd to have produc'd theie ill contriv'd Decrees (wherein we have the Subfriptions of fo many Bishops, who we are fure were not Contemporaries) as Authentic Evidence. The credit of the Northymbrian Presbyers runs as ow. The learned (a) Publisher of their Laws confesses they are of a firicler kind than were in force any where elle in England, at that time; and that he cannot tell who compiled them. He thinks it indeed not altogether unlikely that they might be drawn up by A.B. Oswald; qui, pro Severitate, aies he, qua in Romanis efferbuit Canonibus ob-fivandis, istas Noviter censeatur induxisse: And, as wany other Constitutions of S. Dunstan and S. Ofpald, that are or can be alledg'd in this Cafe, I shall only observe that they were two Zealous (b) Atempters of bringing in the Roman Discipline into the English Church; and that therefore they (or their Worshipers, the Monks) framed their Canons in uch a manuer as they defind to have em obey'd. and not as they were (mirruth) (abmirted to Twas great goodness in the Premier not to produce AB. Egbert's Collections (which he calls (c) English ⁽⁴⁾ Ibid. p. 502. (b Vid. spelm. Conci. Tom. 1. p. 502. c. Whart. Note in Osbera. A. S. Nole 2. P. 111. (2) Right, R. P. S.

Bishops (a) sat personally in the Court with the Sheriff and other great Men of their Dioceles; they (1) visitted yearly in their own persons, and never (as far as I could yet learn) acted by any fort of Deputies or Officials. Mr. Atterbury indeed produces a few infignificant and Counterfeit Records, fome of which feem to come up to his Point; and, to multiply his Witnesses into a fairer Appearance of strength in their Numbers, he refers his Reader to the Decem Scriptores and Spelman's Councils for one and the same Testimony. Spelman says he met with feveral Copies of that Instrument, for which (as if it were some New Matter) the learned Preacher will needs fend us to the Evidences of Canterbury, or Daver, and he gives us one of 'em wherein the pre-tended Archdeacon (Wilfrid) is modeftly placed in the Reer of the Subscribing Bishops; whereas, in the impertiment Evidences of this great Patron of our Synodal Church, he takes his place in the very middle (c) of the Prelates; a Freedom which some late Writers would perswade us to believe, that even the Archdeacons of our own Age have a Title to. This Venerable Decree is said to be enacted at Bacon-celd, in the year 798. but we meet with it (d) afterwards, in a finer form, at Clovesbee; where the ingenious Monk, who new model'd it, has fet the Archbishop and his Suffragans in their proper Order; affigning each of 'em a Train of Abbats and Prieffs. who are suppos'd (forfooth) to attend them to the Synod from their respective Dioceses. In the close of fome of these Lists we have, here and there, an hu tro pil

an

Wi

Pr

fu

(e th

fcr

no

CT

T

th W

he

in

dr

(a)

69

to ma

⁽⁴⁾ Vid. LL. Hen. r. cap. 7. Spelm. Concil. Tom. 1. p. 416. (c) Conf. Spelm. Tom. 1. p. 342. (d) Speim. Tom. 1. p. 325.

⁽b) Conflit. Odoni. Archiep. apuch humble Deacon : But, because 'twas fit that the Megopolitan's should outshine therest, the Courtly Compiler of his famous Evidence has kindly dubb'd His an Aochdeacon; and twas in his power to have likewife furrounded him with Arch Abbats and Arch Priefts, Sir Henry Spelman was wifer than to draw any fuch Conclusions, as Mr. Atterbury has done, from any Canons in either of these Councils; and he would (especially) have been asham'd to have produc'd theie ill contriv'd Decrees (wherein we have the Subcriptions of fo many Bishops, who we are fure were not Contemporaries) as Authentic Evidence. The credit of the Northymbrian Presbyers runs as ow. The learned (a) Publisher of their Laws confesses they are of a fricter kind than were in force any where elle in England, at that time; and that he cannot tell who compiled them. He thinks it indeed not altogether unlikely that they might be drawn up by A.B. Ofwald; qui, pro Severitate. hies he, qua in Romanis efferbuit Canonibus obwany other Constitutions of S. Danstan and S. Ofnald, that are or can be alledg'd in this Cafe, I shall only observe that they were two Zealous (b) Atempters of bringing in the Roman Discipline into he English Church; and that therefore they for their Worshipers, the Monks) framed their Canons in such a manuer as they defind to have emulobey'd, nd not as they were (mirruth) (ubmicted to Iwas great goodness in the Premier not to produce AB. Egbert's Collections (which he calls (c) English

(19)

⁽a) Ibid. p. 502. (b Vid. Spelm. Conci. Tom. 1. p. 502. c. Richt. Note in Osbera. A. S. Nolecz. P. 111. (a) Richt. t. p. 5.

Constitutions made in the middle of the Eight Century to prove the yet (d) greater Antiquity of our Archidiaconal Jurisdiction. Did he know ('tis verily beliv'd he did not?) that some of these were of a (e) later Date than is pretended? And does he not know that the Northymbrian Canons are likewise younger than they feem to be, and borrow'd from abaoad. being only dress'd up (a la mode d' Anglois) with Saxon penalties and Mulcis? If he does not, lethim have a little patience till I am at leifure to give him the Remainder of my Insipid Notes on Northumberland; and, I dare engage, he will be prevail'd on to believe that both of 'em are of Equal Authority. I am still of Opinion (with humble submission, Sir, to your felf and other better Judges than I am) that no Archdeacon ever Excercis'd any Jurisdiction in England till some time after the Conquest: that is, till the Canon Law was establish'd here. That and the Feudal-Law are about the same Age with us, and as this made great Changes in the Civil Governmenty fo did the other in the Ecclefiaftical. first Institution possibly of an Archdeacon, the Diocele of Canterbury, is recorded in old Infinument of the Monasticon Anglicanum; Refusal to Consecrate a new Bishop of St. Meria's (in the Suburbs of Canterbury) (a) dicens good in una Civitate due Episcopi minime esse deberent, &c. Novus enime bonnos tel nea dum Consuctudinem Patria vel Dignitarem Dorobermenlis Enelefie edolfus, untiquem Antecefforum fuorum morem in bac parte sequi superfedit sipsum Princes, &cc. p. 140 (6) Monast. Angl. Tom. 1. p. 26.

igitar non Subrogavit Jed loco Episcopi quendam Clerioum Jum Archidisconum ordinavit, quod Je fecisse ante mortem sugar vehementer indoluir. Archidiaconus ergo Gousti-Thomas, the first Norman Archbishop of York, was the Man who divided that Diocese into (b) Arch-deaconcies, and Durender, in his time is the first Archdeacon of Tok that I ever heard of There may be Forty old Copies of the Conquerour's Or-der, against the Bishops mixing Jurisdiction with the Sheriffs, which I have not feen; fince, in all Ages, from that time to this it has been a pretty Common Practice to transcribe those who had transcrib'd others for But neither will this to effectually prove his Point as our confident Patcher up of Evidence imagines. If it be true, that King William, in the Eighteenth Year of his Reign, decreed that no Archdeacon bould bereaften bold any Pleas in the Hundredcourt, it does not thence follow that the Archdeacons exercis'd Jurisdiction in those Courts before the Conqueronr came in because, in less time then Eighteen Years, many Grievances have been known to have had both their Rife and Redreis. By all that he has faid of this matter. I have not one parket Light more than I had before : For, to effectually dothe Laws of (a) Henry the First contradict all that is pre-tended be to enacted by his Fatheran this particular, that he must be a very Young Antiquery (and as Young a Logician) who believes that any certain Conclusion can be drawn from such perplex doring ciples. To his sailing Accusation in this place

1

1 r

e

e e n and

S'S'S'S'S'S

Startes whole Story is an imperimence; and is see the Prof. to his Second Strinish with England On Market 189.

(That, I have liberally given up the General Rights of the Church, as well as the Particular Advantages of my un Office and Authority) Ido not think it becomes me to make any other Reply than that Mr. Acterbury does not know me. I have had the Honour to ferve in Convocation, even fince the Second Edition of his Reforming Book, in a Triple Capacity, having had (belides the Powers which the Archdeaconry gives me) one Proxy from the Bishop of the Diocese, and another from the Chapter : And I am well affur'd that His Lordship and my Reverend Brethren would have been the last Men Living who would have thus entrusted me, had they entertain'd any fuch hard thoughts of me as this Gentleman is inclin'd todo. My constant Adherence to the Doctrine, Discipline and Friends, of the establish'd Church, has actually brought upon me those (a) Menaces and Oppresfions of Great Men which Mr. Atterbury has only feen in a Dream; and whose very shadows have made him tremble.

P. 313. He's unaccountably in Wrath with me for endeavouring to support his own Opinion, about the Antiquity of the Commons in Parliament; because I do not do it with that convincing and irresistible force of Argument which he has done. In the first Place, I meanly setch a proof out of a Dictionary, and so, I find, a Friend of his (about Four or Five Years ago) provid the (b) Rights of a Convocation out of Blownt and Minspers: So that I might hope to outlive this Crime, if there were no heavyer in the Charge. But, to my Sorrow and Shame, the whole Story is an Impertinence; and is nothing in the World to the purpole for which I produce it: 'Tis frivolous and not worth the mention' To state this Question as he would, have it, he omits the Saxon words (then that Loandes Folk] as I had given them out of the Original, and takes only Mr. Somner's Translation [Eletti a Gentis Plebe] to descant upon. He has not, he says, any Skill in the Saxon Tongue; and yet he must beg leave to (ay that either the Original is faulty, or the Translation not proper. It's an extraordinary piece of Courage (let me tell him!) to fay that Mr. Sommer has not Translated the Saxon words, in the Original Record, as he ought to have done; and 'tis especially so, in one who professes himself to have no Skill in the Tongue. But --- We are to know he does this upon very good grounds; because it differs from the Tran-Station which the Parliament it felf made of this Record: For there the words are per la Commune de Nostre Reaume; and la Commune (he is as fure as may be) means the Baronage of England. possibly have as little Skill in the French Tongue, as he has in the Saxon; and yet I must also beg leave to Say that his Translation feems to me much more strain'd and improper than Mr. Somner's. I have, in my time, spell'd over agreat many Transcriptsof French Records, and some Originals, and, in all of em, la Commune feems to lignify the Commons, in the modern Sense of the word; I shall give an instance or two, which (on more Accounts than one) are richly worth Mr. Beterbury's Confideration. In the old Year-Books, (a) fuit dit que le Roy filt les leis per Assent des peres et de la Commune, et non pas les peres et la Commune. In the antient Form of earlie de Clare Comite Chence of Swearing the Kings of this Realm, this Question (amongst others) is recorded : Sire, grantes vous a tener et garder les lers et Customes Maturelles, les quels la Commune de Voftre Repaume aur effue, et les defenderer et efforciere à l'Honeur de Dieu a Vostre poiare. Which was long fince thus Translated into Latine: (a) Concedis Just as Leges & Consuetudine effe tenandas. & promittis per te este protegendas, & ad honorem Dei Corroborandas, quas Vulgus Elegerit. I dare fay, this Translatour meant the same thing by his Vin. gus, which Mr. Sommer did by his Gentis plebs; and both of them would have confiru'd the word La Commune) (in the French Copy of the Charter now be. fore us) just as the latter has done that tounderfolk. I have another Reason which prevails with the to believe that this Charter was not made (as he would have it) in favour only of the Council of Twentyfour, indifferently chosen by the King and (this Gentleman's La Commune) the Peers of the Realin; which is this ! I fee the Bishop of Worcester, the Earls of Lettefter, Glocefter, Warwick, &c. (who were (6) all Members of that Council) are named as (c) Withesses to it; and, in my poor Judgment, it looks a little incongruous that a Grant should be attened by those very persons to whom it is made, For these Reasons, I am yet of Opinion that this fame Saxon Record, is faultless, both in the Original and Transaction; that it was given and granted to the Lifeand Behoof of those Members of Parliament who were chosen by the Commons of England;

⁽a) See the Pref. to his Second Fdit. (b) Letter to a Convocation Man, P. 39.

⁽a) 22. Ed. 3.

2) 22, 11 9.

⁽⁴⁾ Vid. Decem Series. Col. 2746. (6) Vid. Annal. Burton. p. 412. (6) E Cefte Chofe for fre device Boniface Archiepiscopo Cant. Walterode Cantelupo Episcopo Wigorn. Simone de Munifurt Comite Leycoft. Ricardo de Clare Comite Gloucestria, Or. 1bid. p. 418.

and that it as undeniably proves them to be of a more antient standing than the 49th of Henrythe Third, as any Argument which Mr. Atterbury has brought on the same side.

P. 412, 413. He calls Dr. Wake to an Account for rejecting the Authority whereon the Writer of the Letter to a Convocation-man founded his Doctrine, That a Convocation was call'd Churchgemot: And, in the End of that learned Digreifion, he is pleas'd to take notice that the Doctor's Affertion (that one will be hard put to it to bring any Anthor Elder shan Sir Edward Coke, for this Opinion) looks like one of mine. I do not think my felf able (whatever hard thoughts he may have of my affumeing Disposition) to impart any thing to Dr. Wake on this Subject, which may be new to him; But I must freely own that this great Master of Modesty and Good Manuers has, for once, fortunately enough guess'd at my Sentiments. I should never have bog-gled at the Doctor's reckoning Sir Edward Coke an Elder Author than Sir Henry Spelman, beaufe I am pretty fure he is so; Nor can I imagine that, even in the Fourth part of his Institutes, he made any of his Collections out of Sir Heary's Gloffary; fince in 1626. when the First part of the Gloslary was printed, Sir Edward was wholly taken up with the fitting out fome of his other Books to the Preis. He did not live to do the like for this. And, had he taken his Remark from the Glotlary, and not from Henry the First's Mf. Laws thanfelves, he would honestly have own'd it. However; it feems both thefe learned Knights had feen a Copy, or Copies, of these Laws which favour'd that Opinion of theirs: And, with all due Respect and Deserence to their Dan entant and alot great great Judgement, Dr. Wake and I may venture to fay that the Reading was not Genuine. For, fince their Death's, Sir Roger Twilden (and not Mr. Whelor, as our Spruce Advertary is pleas'd to affirm) has publish'd King Henry's Laws, from the most Authentic Manuscript in the Exchequer; compar'd with another in his own hand, and a Third borrow'd from Mr. Selden. In all these Three the word is Scyremor, and not (as they read it) Chirgemot or Chirchgemot: And the former appears to be the true Reading from the very Title of that Chapter, (a) De Generalibis Placitic Comitatuum, quomodo & quando sieri deberent.

P. 415. Skill in Saxon, he is refolv'd, thall be once again his Theme; tho' he has before truely told us that 'tis not bis province: But his whole business, from the Begining to the End of his Book, is medling with what he does not understand. Here he's mightily offended at my not being fatisfi'd with the Opinion of our English Antiquaries and Historians; who Suppos'd that Laga (in Westlevena-Laga, Myrcena-Laga and Denelaga) signify'd Law, whereas it fignifies a Country or Diffrict. And, why may not I (as well as Mr. A.) be fometimes diffarisfy'd with the Opinions of better men than my felf? This Observation of mine has had the good luck to be approved by a very (b) Learned Person, who (by the joynt confent of all our modern Antiquaries) understands the Sazon Language the best of any Man now living: But fuch Anthorities will do nothing with this Hero; and therefore I shall endeavour otherwife to convince him, out of his own (I mean his

⁽⁴⁾ LL. Hen. 1. Cap. 7. Edit. Twifd. p. 18c. (b) Dr. G. Bides. Friends)

(27)

Friend's) Collections, that I am not mistaken in this Conjecture. The first proof he brings against me is from Henry the First's Enlargment of the Confessor's Laws: And I shall here only beg that the Text may he admitted for as Authentic Evidence as the Paraphrase. We have indeed lost the Saxon Copy of the Confessors Laws, but, by the earlyest Translation we have of 'em in the Latine and French, we may probably enough guess how they were worded in the matter now under Debate. In Mr. Selden's Edition of 'em, 'tis true, the French words Danelae, Merchenelae and Westfexlae, are render'd by Lex Danorum, &cc. But this Translation, in many places, appears to be forced and unnatural. I shall not trouble you with more than one Inflance. In the French we read, (a) Que en Danelae fruise la pais le Roi; which is thus Nonfenfically render'd, Qui in Danorum Lege Violaverit pacem Rigis: Whereas, if we will have it Intelligible, it must run, Qui in Provincia Danorum Violaverit, &c. This is more plain yet from a worfe (b) Blunder in the Latine Translation publish'd at Cambridge; where we have Erat autem Les Danorum Norfolk Suffolk et Cantabridgefhire, Would not any Man, of a moderate

⁽a) Cap 3. Edit, Twifd. p. 159. Vid. etiam Cap 4. Ibid. & Hift. Ingulf. Edit. Oxon. p. 88. (b) LL. Ed. Confel. Edit. Camab. p. 149. Vid. & Reliq. Spelm. p. 49. where it appears that the Learned Author (before his Death) was pretty much of my Opinion. LL. Ed. & Guthr. Cap. 7. Duanisga fignifies the same as mid Denum in the other Chapters of those Laws. LL. Camut. R. Englalaga is manifestly the English Territory, and Danelaga the Danish: For, as in Ch. 12. 'vis on Wellsaxon, so in the 14th it's on Denelaga and in the 13th again on Myrcean. The word Lag is frequently met with in the like Composition with the proper Names of Countries, in the old Handish, Danish and Suedish, Writers: Which if Sh. H. Spelman had observed, he had never misinter-pretted these words as well as Ofwildestern, &c. Vid. Concil. Brit. Tom. 1. p. 432. & Monast. Angl. Tom. 1. p. 120.

Talent in thinking, fanly (even the the Idiom of the Saxon Language distallow'd it) that the word Provincia would do better here than Lex: And Yet this is all the Foundation there is for what Mr. Atterbury brings out of the Abbat of Jeruanix, who (understanding both our (a) Saxon Tongue and Antiquities perfectly well) gravely affures us, that Gildas the (b) Britain translated the Marchenelega into Latine; which I wonder our learned Author should overlook. But, if the Abbat's Skill should be doubted, yet sure Gervase of Tilbury's cannot; and a Charter of Henry the First must be admisted, as what will sufficiently clear the point. It must be a great deal (more, I believe, than he has to fay) that's Sufficient with me: For I am strangely harden'd and impenitent in this Matter, and not to be wrought off from any of my Opinions by fuch Arguments as I mostly meet with in his Book. I cannot easily be perswaded that the Courtiers and Ministers of State, in the Reigns next after the Conquest, did so perfectly understand the propriety of the Suren Language as he fanfies: And I'll give him one Authority, of the many I could produce, to prove that my Jealoufy is not groundless. In one Copy of the Conquerour's Laws we have this admirable Etymology of the Saxon word Greve: (6) Videtur etiam quibusdam Greve Vocabulum Nomen effe Compositum ex Anglico Grith er Vos Latino. Grith enim pax eft, Vee Miferia, ipfo Domine otteffente, qui dicit, Voe tibi Bethfaida, Voe tibi Corozaim. Greve igitur ides divitur quod jure debehat Grith, id

⁽a) Take Mr. A's word for it, Rights, &c. p. 416, (b) Decem Stript. Col. 956. (c) Lambard. Arthidion. p. 134.

eft, pacem en illis facere qui patrie inferunt Vœ, id oft, Miseriam vel Malum. Who he was that penn'd this Gloss I know not, but he seems to me to be about the same pitch of Knowledge, in our Saxon Antiquities, with Gerwase of Tilbury and a later Writer. To conclude this Head, Upon the nicest Search that I can make, I do not find that ever the word Lage (in Composition with Dans, Myrsens or Westsexens, in any of our Saxon Remains) can be otherwise rightly translated than by a Province or Countrey: So that I must here venture to repeat my old Affertion, that I am not fatisfy'd with the opinion of those that maintain that there were in this Kingdom, before she Conquest, three suth Codes or Digests of Laws as Mr. Atterbury contends for. The World may possibly hereafter be told (For, fuch (a) Lengths four men will go so ferve an ill Cause 1) that, at the moment I publish this, I have more than one Volume of fuch Laws in my own possession: And I know not how otherwise to guard against a Practice of this kind, than by averring that I am wholly a firanger to them; and am far from being convinced that there is ground to believe P. 432. He brings me over the Coals, in a be-

P. 432. He brings me over the Coms, in a bemitched fort of a Rage; and beyond the Transports of his former Fits. He pronounces me a false, rude and raft, Writer; and, amongst other hard Names, calls me a Member of Convocation, who knows as tittle of the Conditution of that Body as Dr. Wake himfelf does. I cannot see how, upon his own Princi-

⁽a) See the Postscript to a Second Letter about the Execution of the Parliament-Writ for the ensuing Convocation.

fles, he could ever think me a Member of Convocati on; fince be appropriates his Parliamentary Synod to the Province of Canterbury. That I know as little of thefe things as Dr. Wake does, I shall willingly allow to be a great Truth: But I am loath to believe that he has drawn my Picture fo exactly true in the following parts of that Page. When I fay that the King's Writs commanded the Bishops to attend, accompany'd with the Priors Archdeacons and Proctors of the Clergy; he faies, I would endeavour to perswade the World that all the Priors were fummon'd and no Deans. Not I; believe me, Sir, I had no fuch Thoughts. I know not how the Deans came to be omitted in my Lift: But, in good Truth, I meant them no more harm than he himfelf did, when (p. 219.) he likewife forgot them in his Explication of the Cleri Majores; where he only reckons Abbats, Priors (whether all she Priors or no, he best knows) and Archdeacons. But how, faies our good natur'd Friend, can we expect a true Account of Write from him who gives so falfe an one of the Books they are sontain'd in? The affign'd Reason for this heavy Charge is, because I affirm that (in Dugdale's Book of Sunmons) we shall find like Mandates for the Clergwand Commons as for the Nobility: Which, as far as my poor Apprehension reaches, is most literally me. Had I faid there's an equal Number of Precedents, in each kind, it had been indeed a falle Account : but when I only affert that the Mandates for the Clergy and Commons, are like those for the Nobility (calling Them in like manner, to the Parliament, as the o. thers do the Lords Temporal) I cannot possibly difcover any Errour I am in. Two Writs, he acknowledges, there are in it for the Commons; but (as he goes on,

on, very furprizingly) not one for the Clergy, properly so called, that is, for the whole Body of them. Gentleman's Brains and mine are not figur'd alike. If totus Clerus be Latin for the Clergy properly fo call'd, or (as he explains himself) the whole Body of them, there are certainly fuch Mandates as I have mention'd, and fuch as he denies to be there. If he means (as I cannot imagine what else he can mean) that the whole Body of the Clergy is not call'd, because some of 'em are permitted to fend up their Representatives; he might as well have told me that neither is there fo much as one Writ for the Commons properly fo call'd, fince every Individual Free-holder and Inn-keeper (in the feveral Shires, Cities and Buroughs, is not particularly Summon'd. One that Writes at this rate will never perswade me to believe that he does not give his Characters (as he disputes) at Random.

P. 447. I had faid, out of the late Printed Catalogue of the Cotton Manuscripts, that a Journal of the Transactions of both Houses of Parliament (from the beginning of Henry the Eighth's Reign) was drawn up by R. Bowyer, and is still extant; which is certainly true: And he pretends to contradict this by affirming that we have no Journals for the Commons (meaning only as Seperate and Distinct from those of the House of Lords) higher than the First of Edward the Sixth; which, for any thing I know, may be as true: But 'tis as little to his Malicious purpose as the rest of his Impertinencies.

I have now, Sir, done (for ever, I hope) with Mr. Atterbury's Objections. They, from whom I look for fuch future Assistances as will enable me to perfect the Work I have undertaken, are Men of another fort of Temper; and will give me their Instructions in another Manner. Sensible of the Common Instructions

Fluman Nature, thy will meekly and Compassionately reprove those Mistakes in me to which they sometimes feel themselves as lyable as I am: An obliging fort of Treatment, which (I think my self engaged to own) I have had from Mr. Strype, whose Memoirs of AB. Cranmer have been unfairly represented, my Thoughts, and Pen unwarily running into a Character which properly belong'd to the (2) Life of another Metropolitan, publish'dabout the same time.

I must now turn my face towards Scotland : Where (by the way) the Man that should dare to publish fuch a new and salse Exposition of a Statute-Law as Mr. Atterbury has ventur'd to give us of the 25 Hen. 8. would immediately be adjudg'd guilty of Leaseing making; and I need not inform so knowing a person, as he pretends to be, what would follow up. on fuch a Sentence. The Laws of England are perhaps a little better humour'd; but neither will they long endure fuch a Load of Jest and Poetry as this merry Preacher feems to be bringing upon them. But, leaving the Laws to Shift for themselves: Since he has (in a most Familiar manner) accus'd me of taking Things wholy upon Trust in my English Library, I cannot (Sir.) but think my felf concern'd to let you and others know, that there are very few Books, cither in Print or Manuscript, Records, Medals or Coins, whereof any particular Account will be given in the Scotist Historical Library, now going to the Press, which I have not seen (as we English-men use to express it) with my own Eyes. A very few, I fay, they are which have been only describ'd to me by others: And you will be satisfy'd that herein Thave depended upon much better Judgments than my own, when I tell you that my Enquiries at Sir John Cotton's Library were answer'd by Dr. Thomas Smith, at my Lord Longuevil's by Mr. Wotton, at Lambert by Mr. Gibson, 8cc. In Scatland I had every thing laid before me that I could either enquire or with for. The Honourable Society of the College of Justice were fo obliging as to allow me an Access to their rich Treasury of Manuscripts, at all Hours Ordina. ry and Extraordinary; and the most eminently Learned Sir Alexander Seton of Pitmedden (a late Lord of the Session) kindly imparted tome some of his own choice Notes on the Law-Writers, of that Kingdom. What Coins were wanting in my Lord Archbishop of Tark's Collection were supply'd by the Industrous Mr. James Sutherland; whose complete Cabinet was always open to me, and whose kind fervices to the Publick (as well as his private favours to me) will appear in feveral Chapters of that Book. Above all, my best Acknowledgments. are ever due to Sir Robert Sibbald Knight and Dr. of Physic, who, with an unspeakable Generosity and Frankness of Temper, communicated to me all his own Collections which any way respected the Subject Matter of my Book, and pointed out to me many other useful Helps in the hands of (my worthy) friend) Mr. Robert Wadrow, Keeper of the Library at Glasson, and others. By the Assistance of such excet. lent persons as these, I am now enabled to furnish the Publick with (at least) the first Lineaments of a Scotch Historical Library; which I shall give in the following Method: Chap. 1. Of the Writers on the General and Special Geopraphy Natural History and State-Government, of the Kingdom of Scottand. 2. Of the General. Historians of that Nation: 3. Writers of the Lives of: their particular Kings. 4. Ecclesiastical Historians, General. 5. Histories, &c. Of their Bishopricks, Monafteries and Universities. 6. Biographers. 7. Law-Books and Records. 8. Medals and Coins.

pencethe very Collecting of the la Marchael La la Back upon me; mor how much Trouble I have bed in the Composure: And his but a discouraging Prospect (after all) to see so many Men of Gravity and good Learning. to whom I thought my Labours might have been chiefly useful caressing an empty Misrepresenter of our Antiquities, Histories and Records, and Patronizing an AmbitiousWretchin his Infolent Attempis against our antient and Apostolical Church-Government This is doubtless a pleasing and sportful Entertainment to fuch as have long defired to fee us Magnifying our Ecclefiaftical Liberties, and renouncing our Obedience to the King, in order to a yet farther Impropriation of our Revenues: (a) Neque alind fane (faies one of the many good Authors quoted for Mr. Atterbury) magis in bas tam bene constitutà Ecclesia Anglicana timendum atque cavendum est, quam ne clerus munt, com maxime interbo et veritate laboret, fummaque Observanția principi Profusorum atque desoctorum prada at directioni prosena tur, et Imperitorum : Convitiu atque Consumuliu prosen datur, Papulague, fiat Ludibeio et Contempeus. Quod s contingut, gravius Dei flagellum, multique at patient Tempor ra expediando funt quam illa Mariana fuerus. That God (in his mercy) may avert the Evil of this prediction, is the hearty Prayer of and a loan mental firm and (1) 8 P. R.

Your mon oblight and start of affectionate Brother.

W. NICOLSON

⁽a) Antiq. Brit. p. 358.

(141)

Incolund: ice the ver Composited And his but a discounting brown all) to see to many Man of Gravity and good to whom I shought my Labouts might have been useful, carelling an empty Milrepresenten of must quities, Histories and Records, and Patronizing mam-bitious Wretchinkis Infolent Attempts against our antient and Apollolical Church-Governments Uhis is doubtless a pleasing and sportful Entertainment to such as have long defired to see us Magnifying our Ecclesaffical Liberties, and renouncing our Obedience wither King, in order to a yet farther Impropriation of our Revenues: (a) Neque aliad fane (fales one of the many good Authors quoted for Mr. Attethery) magte in her tens bene constitute Eccles (Anglicana oringendon arms cavendon ell, quain de Claius mini, com maximo inflerio et veritate laboret, summapre Observacio principale de Professione atque descritores principale de Constitute de Professione de Constitute de C the hearty Prayer of the month of direct recommendation of the best of

The following several flaters with the following the follo

The state of the s

⁽⁴⁾ Antiq Brit p. 358.

